The Hub of the Club

Centrally located the Duanesburg area offers many choices on which direction to go. A number of trails intersect here, creating a hub. Heading north to Mariaville, west to Sloansville, or south to East Berne might make the decision tough.

Riders use the cattle-pass under the railroad on C7B in Duanesburg

The Duanesburg and Delanson area host many services such as food and fuel. Parking areas are available for those with trailers. The ever important restrooms are not far from the trail. The Duanesburg Community Center is located next the trail C7E, making for an interesting way to travel there for a workout or an event.

The majority of the trails in this area are located in an upland valley from which the Normans Kill begins its journey to the Hudson River.

Another feature unique in the valley is the rail road. This line is very active and requires that all snowmobiles remain off rail road property. Snowmobiles are only allowed to cross over tracks at gated auto crossings. Trail C7B does pass under the rail road, while C7E uses a gated crossing.

Trail C7B along side the power lines.

Both C7B and C7E run beneath high power transmission lines in a few spots. These are natural corridors allowing snowmobiles to make otherwise hard to reach connections.

As in other areas, the trails cross both

So if you are looking for a good area to ride, this might be your starting point, plenty of service and access to trails. Editor note: Each month will feature a different section of Frontier Sno Riders trails.
